

Four Seasons

By: Charles Kanoy

He stands still in the sky.
Producing life with warm ease.
With caution proceed.

He becomes distant,
Try as he might not to leave.
Everyone cries on.

He is frigid now.
The furthest he's ever been.
He begs for the reunion.

He's miraculous,
Returning to those not kind.
Future triumph to come.